“With the Wink of an Eye”

Andreas Altmann, born 1960 in Vienna, has had a passion for photography since childhood. After many publications and exhibitions he opened a studio in the Viennese Löwengasse in 2002. It combines a gallery and studio as a platform not only for his, but also for other creative projects. At the moment he is exhibiting his Greece photos and also working on a book on this topic. From May 28th 2004 (*) he will be teaching “digital photography” for five weeks at the summer academy on the isle of Zakynthos.

Andreas Altmann writes: “What interests me on photography is to tell stories with pictures”. Apply contrasts thematically and optically, tranquil pictures as antithesis to the loud time of today. I always like to highlight the manifold aspects of human existence with the wink of an eye and for those observers, who have retained their curiosity many things are only revealed after a closer and repeated look. I want to discover the motives having this potential and through my “findography” bring them to life.”
